- Upon the examination the jury, without the presence of the audience, gives the decision of acceptance, rejection or correction by simple majority vote at least. The jury's decision is submitted to the Graduate School by concerned EABD as an attachment to minute. The student whose thesis needs to be corrected makes the necessary or suggested amendments to the thesis and defends it before the same jury again within three months at the latest. A new thesis subject is assigned to the student whose thesis is rejected or rejected after defence following correction or if student requests so, s/he will be issued master programme diploma without thesis provided that the course loads, project requirement and similar requirements are fulfilled by him/her. The student who is assigned a new thesis subject may register to continue his/her education provided that tuition fees of the related term are paid. In such case, the student status continues without benefiting rights granted to students other than those to fulfil the requirements for the thesis and take examinations.
