

EVERYTHING HAPPENS FOR A REASON

Nowadays, we read the stories of successful people to achieve their success. However, beyond the success, we are attracted by the difficulties they have faced and their ambition to go on. I want to talk about a man, Steve Jobs, who never give up trying although he fails several times. Before he was born, his parents decided to give him an adoptive family. It seems like a negative situation at first, but his new family has the opportunity to provide him with a more qualified life. As he grows up, he gets involved with the electronic devices in his family's garage.

However, his interest on these devices is not sufficient for him getting to hang of his lectures at the college and he takes the lessons which he considers as more necessary then he leaves the college. He becomes poor, lies on the floor but never gives up. Although the difficulties he faced, he invents the first high technological computer, which is an example of we use today, in their garage with the help of his friends. In a year, their company 'Apple' becomes very popular. Besides these successes, problems never end up. He is fired from the company which causes some positive changes in his life. He improves a better computer called 'I Mac' and found the best animation studio 'Pixar'. He becomes the CEO of the company that he was fired. There is no happy ending in his story but whatever he lives has a reason except his untimely death. Undoubtedly, he is one of the role models in the world for not only his success but also his position to difficulties he faced.
